

Amateur Sport

By David Moser

The winners will be, could be . . .

Oh my, it's that time of year again.

Sask Sport's annual athlete-of-the-year luncheon is scheduled for Friday in Saskatoon. It might be difficult for some of you to make the 2 1/2 hour drive up to the Bridge City, so here are the 1992 award winners to save you the trip.

For the second straight year, a mysterious brown envelope — coffee stained and reeking of Absorbine Jr. — was slipped under the door of the Amateur Sport office sometime Monday night.

The envelope contained the fearless predictions — written in crayon on the back of a losing Sport Select ticket — of some unknown self-professed follower of the amateur sport scene.

And the winners are . . .

MALE: For the second year in a row, wrestler Jeff Thue of Regina wins the award. Thue is a silver medallist from the 1992 Summer Olympics in Barcelona.

FEMALE: Yes, Stacy, there is a Santa Claus and for you he's coming in February. Regina's Stacy Singer wins the award after being snubbed four times by the academy, er, Sask Sport. Singer is a five-time world junior baton twirling champion.

MASTER: Rower Rob Currie of Regina paddles to victory in this one. Currie is also a tireless coach and administrator with the Regina Rowing Club.

TEAM: The Regina Razors Special Olympics floor hockey team clips the field here.

Let's hope our fearless prognosticator's predictions are better than the 1-for-4 in 1991.

