

A garage sale helped the Yorkton Special Olympics committee kick off its fundraising activities.

Garage sale raises $240

The fundraising efforts for next June's Special Olympics kicked off Saturday with a garage sale.

"It was absolutely great," said volunteer Betty Cheavins.

The garage sale, held on the Corona Motor Inn parking lot, raised about $240, she said.

The Olympics, which will run June 17-19 has a budget of $30,000.

A second garage sale will be held in the spring, and if people wish to donate things, they can be picked up now, said Cheavins.

The group will also be out to raise money at Halloween by having high school volunteers in various locations painting faces for $1 per child, she said. Although final plans are still being made, Cheavins expects the painters will be at several churches in the city, and at the Corona.
